Schalom,

I Patryk Paweł Wziontek born on 29.03.1991, as a son to Thomas Yahweh Levin I have my claims to a succession in Israel, that states my situation as the designated successor to the throne, I am entitled to diplomatic treatment and protocol befitting my position. In royal courts, including presidential ones, the Chief of Protocol and their office are responsible for managing official and state visits, official and international events, as well as diplomatic events. This underscores my eligibility to receive diplomatic treatment in accordance with established protocol.

The Davidic Covenant refers to God's promises to David through Nathan the prophet and is found in 2 Samuel 7 and later summarized in 1 Chronicles 17:11-14 and 2 Chronicles 6:16. This is an unconditional covenant made between God and David through which God promises David and Israel that the Messiah (Christ) would come from the lineage of David and the tribe of Judah and would establish a kingdom that would endure forever .

The covenant is significant as it promises the establishment of a kingdom that would endure forever, with the Messiah coming from the lineage of David and the tribe of Judah. It is an unconditional covenant, meaning that God does not place any conditions of obedience upon its fulfillment .

The fulfillment of the Davidic Covenant is ultimately in Christ the Messiah. The major issues related to the covenant are when and how God's promises to David will be fulfilled in Christ. It is believed that Christ will fulfill God's promises to David in the future, after His Second Coming to the earth, by establishing and reigning over a literal, earthly, political kingdom for a thousand years on this present earth, just as His ancestor David reigned over a literal, earthly, political kingdom . (Christ, The Messiah - Confirmed by Goddess Asherah and Elders of Zion).

The Davidic Covenant is an unconditional covenant between God and David, through which God promises the lineage of David and the tribe of Judah that the Messiah would come from them and establish a kingdom that would endure forever. This covenant is fulfilled ultimately in the Messiah, and it is believed that its complete fulfillment will occur in the future, after His Second Coming to the earth.

The UN Charter does not specifically address the issue of receiving royals in other countries. However, the principle of sovereign equality among member states implies that the treatment of royals from one country by another should be in accordance with the principles of equality and mutual respect. This means that the decision to receive a royal from another country is generally a matter of diplomatic protocol and mutual agreement between the countries involved. The German diplomatic protocol regarding the reception of royals from other countries is guided by the principles of creating an environment for successful diplomacy and mutual respect.

According to a snippet from a source on protocol and etiquette, royal courts, including presidential ones, usually have a Chief of Protocol in their household. The Chief of Protocol and their office are responsible for managing official and state visits, official and international events, as well as diplomatic events. This indicates that the reception of royals from other countries is managed within the framework of official and diplomatic events, with the aim of fostering successful diplomacy and mutual respect.

The Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations of 1961 allows every sending state to display flags at its diplomatic missions in the receiving state, indicating that there are established provisions governing diplomatic displays at official buildings and events in Germany.

The German diplomatic protocol emphasizes the creation of an environment for successful diplomacy and mutual respect.

With every right and every responsibility I am a successor to the Throne of Israel, so mote it be!
